WHEELING, MAY 3, 1895.

The Wife Wins.

The orphan's court of Philadelphia has just rendered what appears a just judgment in a very interesting case. A wife could have settled with her husband's brothers and sisters, who were willing to give her the widow's share of the little estate if she would admit that she was not married to their brother. This she was unwilling to do, made her fight and won it.

The woman testified that there was a marriage by a clergyman, but that in a moment of passion she tore up the certificate. This hasty act enabled the brothers and sisters to make all the trouble for her. It was shown that for eighteen years she and the man she claimed as husband lived together as man and wife, and that to their limited circle of acquaintance they were known as man and wife.

Both worked to sustain their little home, a fact on which the judge commented as being rare in unlawful cohabitations. He was impressed, also, by the orderly life they led and by the affection of each for the other. The point was made that at the funeral the woman claiming to be the widow did not ride in the first carriage, which is supposed to carry most of the grief. It happened that a brother and his wife rode in the first carriage, and the relations between them and the claimant gave reason enough why she should go to the grave in another carriage. On this feature of the case the judge remarked with force and a touch of humor, perhaps unconscious, that "it is making too much of the conventionalisms of society to argue that a woman is to lose her standing as a wife because she refuses to ride at the head of her husband's funeral procession." Finally the judge said that all the conditions of a lawful marriage being present in this case the woman was the wife and is now the widow of the man whom she claimed as her husband.

There was something more than a mere name involved in this case, and the woman is to be congratulated on her victory. She had the good fortune to fall in the hands of a judge of common sense as well as of legal learning, a combination of good qualities not always found on the wool-sack.

This is a great year for defaulters. It must be said for them that they are doing a good deal to keep money in circulation.

Prices of Certain Commodities.
 Yesterday the INTELLIGENCER obliged the Register with some further instruction on the wool question. It is always a pleasure to do this, and no pay is asked for it; but in the way of friendly reciprocity we would like to know what has become of the Register's 26-cent wool of last year.

That wool figured largely in campaign time in the Register. It made no impression, it is true, on the market, but it did impress deeply all who read it. It is not necessary to say what impression it made. Some inferences may be drawn from the election returns. But never mind election returns until next year.

What has become of that 26-cent wool? What is it selling for now? Has free trade made it higher, as the Register thought would come to pass? Is the farmer who held his wool for a 26-cent buyer to come his way happier because he held it? Will his wool bring him more in the market to-day than it would then?

If the farmer happens to be a little short of corn, oats, flour, beef or lamb oil will his last year's wool clip buy him more of these things now than it would have bought a year ago?

If other things are up and wool down—down to the lowest point on record—what is the matter with wool? Has the removal of the duty on wool anything to do with it? If not, what has something to do with it?

This world has great need of another Christopher Columbus to shake up some more territory. Presently there will be nothing more for Great Britain to lay hold of. That will be inexpediently sad and may have a stunting effect on the British mind.

Coal. Strike in West Virginia.
 Everybody must regret that coal mining has been brought to a standstill in the lower part of the state, in which region there has been so fine a development. It is a pity that capital and labor there must be unproductive while the disagreement lasts.

There is, however, from the public point of view, a higher consideration that this, the preservation of the public peace. It is very much to be hoped that property and life may be respected. In West Virginia we have a good record in this particular—let it be preserved without blemish.

Let it be said that in West Virginia we can have our business disputes without resort to violence. This is one of the best ways to induce men and money to come into the state.

ENGLAND can afford to flatter us. We have given her a tariff and a diplomatic policy that are just to the queen's taste.

Funeral Reform.

One of the speakers before the funeral directors' convention in session at Pittsburgh said that under the present code of ethics men of this calling discourage funerals beyond the ability of the family to pay. This they do as a matter of conscience as well as of business.

It is well for somebody to put on the brakes. There are families that lay themselves out to have ostentatious funerals, never stopping to think that they cannot afford the luxury and giving no more heed to the fact that probably they will never be able to pay for it all. They make themselves think they are doing it out of respect for the dead. In fact it is done to tickle the pride of the living.

The funeral directors have undertaken a good work, but they cannot accomplish all or even the greater part of it. Modest funerals will have to be made fashionable. Then it will all be easy enough. Persons who are known to be able to make all the show that a funeral will stand will have to set the fashion. Then the rest of us will have the courage to fall into line.

Pittsburgh thinks she has a scheme to furnish herself and her sister city with pure water. That would be a revelation to any people heretofore dependent on Ohio river water.

The Horse is Passing.

Time was when base ball players were carted around by horse power to work up interest in the game. Now they move swiftly and smoothly in a gaily decked electric car, the while the band plays and the small boy wishes he could catch on.

One by one uses for horses are passing away. Presently some enterprising circus man will catch the town with a great street parade in which the electric cars will take the place of the lumbering wagon.

The horse will continue to be a noble animal, but never again will be the factor he has been in the economy of civilization. If the horse were consulted he would probably express himself as quite satisfied with the new order of things.

MR. WANAMAKER is going to entertain at his home every member of the Pennsylvania legislature and everybody connected therewith if they will all come. This is understood to be Mr. Wanamaker's formal announcement of his candidacy for the United States senate to succeed Mr. Cameron. If he can't reach the boys this way it will be a hopeless case.

The Nicaraguan minister of foreign affairs, in view of the status of things in Washington, remarks: "The Monroe doctrine is dead." Not so, senator. The Monroe doctrine is merely mislaid for the present. Before long it will be found and restored to its old honored place. At present it would be of no use to them in Washington if they had it.

CONSCRIPTS and jail birds from the mother country will help to swell the Spanish forces in Cuba, but this is not the best kind of fighting material. It does not appear that the flower of the Spanish chivalry is eager to go against the Cuban climate and the Cuban fighters.

Island people will meet to-night to protest against the sale of beer in the base ball park. Beer is sold on the fair grounds, which are also on the island. Without determining the question whether beer should be sold at either place, wherein lies the difference?

YESTERDAY'S game of base ball would have been more entertaining if Kenton had not been so greatly overmatched by Ours. But Kenton will be stronger to-day and may make the home team hustle. This is great weather for all who enjoy outdoor sport.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

David Ingalls, who died in Springfield, N. Y., in 1893, was known as the Springfield miser, and left $600,000 to charitable institutions. Not a cent was given to relatives. The cost of breaking the will has been not less than $100,000. What is left of the estate will now be divided between two sisters and a niece of the miser.

Dr. Sargent, physical director of Harvard, has opposed the introduction of the military drill in schools enthusiastically. It does not develop the body, if used without previous physical training, he asserts, but, on the contrary, inclines those taking part to contracted chests and round shoulders.

A woman who visited the menagerie in Central park in New York caught sight of the dromedary and exclaimed: "What a beautiful creature!" Evidently thinking her adjective might be revised, she added presently: "He's so innocent-looking."

California is to have, where the court chooses to order it, alternate jurors—that is, two extra jurors to sit and hear as does the regular panel. Then if one of the latter falls sick, an alternate may take his place, and a mistrial be thus avoided.

PERSONAL POINTS.

Jean Ingelow is now a venerable woman of 74. She spends most of her years at her quiet home in Kensington, alternating her time with a sojourn each season at Nice. In both places she is surrounded by her household pets, and in this life of quiet domesticity she passes her time, saying little of her work unless urged to do so. She is described as "a sweet-faced gray-haired woman, in a cap," with nothing romantic or suggestive of her profession in her appearance.

At the Schiller theatre, in Berlin, a performance of the "Damen Krieg," Schiller's "Bataille de Dames," was given recently in honor of the one hundred birthday of the translator, Frau Muchling. She was once an actress and wife of a theatrical manager. She brought out Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots" for the first time in German and introduced Malibran and Henrietta Sonntag to Germany.

China-hunting women will be interested to learn of a loan exhibition to take place soon at President Angell's home at Ann Arbor, Mich. It is entirely an exhibit of "old blue" ware, of which many valuable pieces are owned in the university town. It is for the benefit of certain patients undergoing treatment in the hospitals.

Eighty years ago Sri Vikrama Rajah Singha, king of Kandy, the last native ruler of Ceylon, was deposed and Ceylon was added to the British empire. His grandson has just been appointed a clerk in a government office at Colombo at a salary of 600 rupees, or about $180 a year.

Realism is still making its way. Even George Meredith yields to the new taste, and his latest serial includes a realistic description of a prize fight in the Whitechapel district.

Hoke Smith's saddle-horse is one of the sights of Washington. It is a big and not very well groomed animal. The secretary himself is not an ideal figure of a horseman.

The Dinner Bell.

Sounds but a mockery to the dyspeptic. He hears it, of course, but his stomach does not respond to the call. He "goes through the motions" and suffers afterwards for the small amount of victuals he partakes of. THE R. OF P. WAR.

The Regular Order Will Show no Quarter to Receders.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2.—At a conference of the supreme officers of the Knights of Pythias it was decided to wage war on the receders from the order, who have started "The Improved Order Knights of Pythias." Chancellor Commander Ritchie was in doubt about the wisdom of bringing on a fight, but the other supreme officers insisted that no quarter should be given.

The Improved Order Knights of Pythias had its origin in the action of the last supreme lodge, in deciding that hereafter the ritual of the order shall be printed in the English language only, and the English language only shall be used in the secret work of the order. The German speaking members of the order throughout the United States took all at the action and established the opposition order, which authorizes the establishment of both English speaking and German speaking lodges. The supreme chancellor commander will not say what course will be pursued, but it is understood that suit will be begun to enjoin the new order from using the name of the old.

ZELIA'S $40,000 CHECK.

She Still Wishes to Recover It From George Gould.

TRENTON, N. J., May 2.—The papers in the case of Ixozella Ruhman, better known as Zelia Nicolaus, against George J. Gould for $40,000, were filed this morning in the office of the clerk of the supreme court of this state. The papers aver that the plaintiff was in possession of a check of deposit or deposit certificate of the value of $40,000, and that this certificate, which she afterward lost in Jersey City, was found by George J. Gould, who has refused to return it, although repeatedly asked to do so. She then charges that Gould has fraudulently converted the certificate to his own use.

The petition sets out that the plaintiff is only nineteen years of age and a minor, and asks that the court appoint Lawyer Alexander Simpson as her next friend, to prosecute the suit. The court granted the request. Gould must file his answer within thirty days from the time the summons was served at Communipaw last week.
